

Leadership in a post-modern world

Dr. Karl Moore

Friday, September 11th
7:00 PM

Dr. Karl Moore (BSc, MA, MBA, PhD), a member of McGill's Faculty of Management since 2000, teaches graduate-level courses in leadership and globalization in addition to extensive involvement in executive education and MBA programs with leading universities including: Oxford, LBS, Cambridge, Darden, INSEAD, Duke, the Drucker School, the Rotterdam School of Management, IIM Bangalore, Queen's and McGill. Prior to joining academia, Dr. Moore worked for 12 years in senior corporate management positions for IBM, Bull and Hitachi. Dr. Moore has published several research articles and books, his latest work being "Origins of Globalization", written together with historian David Lewis and published in April 2009. He has also written many op-ed pieces for leading newspapers, and hosts a weekly videocast at the globeandmail.com on leadership and management. We are pleased to have Dr. Moore speak to us on one of his current research interests, namely the challenges of leadership in a world where information is a click away, and where friends are collected in the hundreds...

Join us at 7:00 PM for an informal supper, followed by Dr. Moore's presentation and an opportunity for Q & A.
