
Reasons people seek out a mentor

There are many reasons Christians seek a mentoring relationship. Which of these are important in your desire to be mentored?

Score each 0 - 5

I believe a mentor can help me develop spiritual disciplines and form a closer relationship with God.
I need to gain a clearer sense of focus in life and ministry.
I am conscious that in my life and ministry I need insight and accountability in relation to issues of sexuality, use of money and use of power.
I want to develop as a relational leader.
I want to understand and develop my unique mix of ministry gifts and skills.
I need to become more accountable for the time and effort I put into marriage and family relationships.
I struggle with stress in ministry.
There are specific ministry and life skills I would like to acquire ().
I am moving through a time of decision and exploring options for the future.
I need someone with whom to debrief critical ministry situations.
I need to resolve or manage interpersonal conflict.
I need some ways of objectively reviewing my life and ministry and get a 'fix' on where I am and where I need to develop.
I want someone to keep me on the growing or cutting edge.
My ministry changing and I would like to manage this transition well.
I need to be held accountable for specific commitments in my life and ministry.
I would like to be better organised for effective ministry.
I want to maintain an ongoing commitment to learning and growth.
I would like to equip, lead and develop the leaders around me.	