6 PASSAGES

From 1337 to 1453, a series of battles were fought between France and England during the late Middle Ages. There were two major issues that they fought over during the conflict that became famously known as the Hundred Years' War. This war was the longest war in recorded history, spanning through the reigns of five French kings and five English kings. The war didn't last exactly 100 years, but instead 116 years.

First, the Duchy of Guyenne belonged to the English kings. A duchy is a territory held by a duke or duchess, sometimes it is also called a dukedom. The duchy was far from England, in the southwest corner of France, so it was subject to French rule. The Duchy of Guyenne remained in English possession but was an integral (essential) part of the French feudal system. It provided jobs, food, and livelihoods to French citizens.
