6 PASSAGES

The Earth is a vast planet with diverse landscapes, cultures, and people. Water takes up about 70% of the Earth's surface, which means that land covers the other 30%. Of that 30% of land, roughly 33% is desert, and 24% is mountains. That leaves only about 15% of the surface of the Earth where people live.

Each section of continuous land uninterrupted by an ocean is called a continent. There are 7 continents on Earth: Asia, Africa, North America, South America, Europe, Australia, and Antarctica. The continents were formed through a process called plate tectonics.

These continents are defined based on their size, location, geological structure, and cultural and historical significance. Continents are an important way of categorizing the world's geography, and they play a significant role in shaping our understanding of global history, culture, and identity.
