At first Napoleon refused to sell because he wanted to expand his empire. Jefferson sent James Monroe and Robert Livingston to France to try to negotiate. Napoleon later became desperate for money due to the conflicts in Europe, so he sold the land. He also believed the sale of the territory would hurt the British, who at the time, were his enemy. He planned to use the money to invade England. The United States bought the Louisiana Territory for $15 million in 1803. The new land totaled 828,000 square miles and today includes all or part of 15 different states. At the time, the United States did not have all the money needed to buy the land from France. The United States ended up borrowing money from two banks in Europe that charged 6% interest.
