AMELIA EARHART

Amelia Earhart was a female American aviator. Earhart, nicknamed Lady Lindy, was born in Kansas on July 24, 1897. She is most known for being the first woman to fly solo over the Atlantic Ocean. Amelia was an advocate for women's rights and opportunities and had a keen fascination with aviation.

From an early age, Amelia was very adventurous. At the age of 7, she built a small roller coaster with her sister Muriel, and claimed it was like "flying". The sisters weren't into "girly" things. Instead, they played sports like football, basketball, and baseball. They also collected bugs and frogs, and even shot a rifle.

After high school, Amelia attended the Ogontz School in Pennsylvania, but she quit school to become a Red Cross Nurse's Aide in Toronto, Canada. She treated wounded soldiers during World War I. She spent her free time watching the Royal Flying Corps practice.

She took an interest in flying after attending an airshow. Later that day, she went on an airplane ride with World War I pilot Frank Hawks. At only a few hundred feet in the air, she knew she had to fly more. So, Amelia began flying lessons with Neta Snook. By 1921 she had bought her first airplane, a Kinner Airster biplane. She nicknamed her bright yellow airplane "The Canary." Finally, in October of 1922, she earned her National Aeronautics Association license - her pilot license. She was only 16 years old.

In 1928, Earhart joined two other pilots on a flight across the Atlantic Ocean. She departed Canada on June 17 as a passenger aboard a seaplane called Friendship. Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon piloted the seaplane, which landed in North Carolina. She was the first female passenger to fly over the Atlantic. The trip took over 20 hours and Amelia became well known after the flight.
