MIDDLE AGES

The Middle Ages, or Medieval Period in Europe was between the years of 476 and the early 14th century, or the 1300s. The fall of Rome happened in the year 476 and is when historians say the time period began and the 14th century is when the Middle Ages ended, and the Renaissance began.

Historians don't like to call this time period more important periods of history. Instead, the Medieval Period is being used more often. The Medieval Period is sometimes called the Middle Ages or even the Dark Ages as there was no rich history, technology, engineering, or art...

During the Medieval Period, it is true that there were no great nation ...states that united Europe. There was still a unifying power, though. The Catholic Church was a very powerful institution in Europe during the Middle Ages. The church formed alliances and helped countries, kings, and leaders who supported the church.

The Catholic church was dominant in Europe and Islam was growing in the Middle East during this time period. The Islamic church was more powerful in the Middle East than even the Catholic church was in Europe. Muslim armies united many peoples throughout the Middle East and encouraged science, education, and art to prosper.
