The city of Boston was under control of the King of Britain and was filled with British troops. Many colonists disliked the king's laws, the taxes they were forced to pay, and the presence of British soldiers. This growing movement began the urge to become an independent country. The British army was well trained and one of the strongest armies in the world. The Battle of Bunker Hill was a significant battle during the Siege of Boston. The Battle of Bunker Hill took place in 1775. The battle was fought on Breed's Hill and Bunker Hill in Charlestown, Massachusetts just a few months after the start of the American Revolution. Most of the battle was actually fought on Breed's Hill. The British mistakenly thought that Breed's Hill was Bunker Hill, hence the name the Battle of Bunker Hill.
