then answer questions.

Ancient Egyptian religion was polytheistic which meant they believed in many gods. One of the most important gods in Ancient Egypt, seen as the ruler of all gods, was the sun god Ra. Egyptians believed that Ra created all life, even other gods. Based on paintings from thousands of years ago, Ra was portrayed as a man with the head of a falcon or hawk. He wore a headdress (crown) in the shape of the sun encircled by the Uraeus (sacred cobra). Amun was another extremely important god. He ruled the sky, sun, and air and often appeared as a man with a ram's head. A temple in Thebes (modern-day Luxor) was built to honor Amun during the New Kingdom. Amun and Ra were later combined to create an even more powerful god, Amun-Ra. The Valley of the Kings at Thebes was an area in Egypt where the most powerful pharaohs were buried.
