TENSIONS RISING

DID YOU KNOW?

Colonists immediately began a boycott of British goods.

The French and Indian War lasted from 1754 to 1763. The American Indian War took place between the American colonies and Native Americans. In this war, British troops helped American colonists fight against the Native Americans. The colonies won the war, but only because they had help from British soldiers. King George III spent a large amount of money buying expensive supplies for his army to protect the colonies.

King George III and the British government felt that the colonists should help pay for the expense of the war and the expense of British soldiers stationed in the American colonies.

Most of the 13 colonies were founded by people who wanted to escape persecution in England. Persecution is the act of being treated harshly, especially for a person's religious beliefs. As the British government became more involved with the colonies, tensions increased.

Originally, the British government had allowed the colonies to govern themselves. The colonies were proud to be British. In 1764, that all changed. The British government decided to impose new laws and taxes on the colonies.

The British government, known as Parliament, decided to pass the Sugar Act (a tax on sugar) in 1764. Great Britain was far away from the American colonies, so they didn't want people all the way across the ocean telling them what to do or how to run the country.
