There are many times you are given options in life and you vote for your wish. For example, in school you may have raised your hand when the teacher gave a choice like, “Do you want to do a fun science experiment or art project?” Or, at home perhaps mom and dad asked, “Do you want to go to McDonalds or Wendy’s?” Maybe you have voted for class officers in your school. Sometimes, if the results aren’t what you really wanted, you may feel like your opinion and wishes don’t count.

Voting is a process where people express an opinion by casting a vote, either formally or casually. Often times, voting refers to choosing candidates for public office at the local, state, and national (federal) levels. Voting enables the majority to rule. In the United States, voting is a right, privilege, and responsibility for those over age 18, though it wasn't always that way. Voting today is free and voluntary.
