The American Flag has changed multiple times throughout the years. Many consider Betsy Ross to be the first to sew the flag. She was friends with some influential people. Betsy attended Christ Church in Philadelphia. Her church pew was next to George and Martha Washington's bench.

Betsy often told the story of how she came to sew the American flag. In late May of 1776, Continental Congress members approached her at her upholstery shop. George Washington brought Ross a sketch of a flag with a five-pointed star. He asked her to sew the first American flag. She made a five-pointed star and set about making her flag.

EARLY FLAGS- Up until now, there were various flags for the colonies and militias. For example, the Continental Navy had a "Rattlesnake Flag" that said, Don't Tread on Me. The "Liberty Tree" flag had a green pine tree on white background. It read, "An Appeal to Heaven" and was used on Washington's ships.

EARLY FLAGS - The first common flag was called the Grand Union Flag. It was very similar to the British Flag. It was a Union Jack or the King's Colours. The mistake at Prospect Hill showed the need for a new flag.

BETSY ROSS FLAG - The confusion of the flag led the Congressional Committee to request a new flag. Betsy Ross finished the flag in 1776. The new flag was adopted on September 14, 1777. It had 13 alternating red and white stripes representing the colonies. The blue upper left corner had 13 white stars in a circle. These stars symbolized a new constellation. The flag colors were symbolic. Red meant courage, blue symbolized justice, and white signified innocence. Note - there are no documents that prove Betsy Ross' story.

ANOTHER THEORY - Others suggest that Congressman Francis Hopkinson designed the first American Flag. He designed Continental money, the coin, and the Great Seal. Again, there is no proof or formal sketch.
