COLD WAR
The world was divided into two fighting powers: the United States and the Soviet Union (USSR). The ALLIES included Great Britain, France, and the United States and the Soviet Union (USSR). The two countries agreed that Germany should be divided into two parts. The western part would be a democracy of free people, and the eastern part would be a democracy of free people. In the late 1700s, the USSR functioned differently from the United States. Communists believe that everyone should share everything equally with everyone else. They disagreed on how to run the country. The United States believed that the government should be run by the people.
