6 PASSAGES

The French and Indian War (1754 to 1763) was fought by the colonists against New France. Each side had Native American allies and the colonists also had Britain's help.

Britain sent troops to the colonies to help them fight the French. Every war costs money, and Britain needed the money to help pay for the troops and supplies. The British Parliament (government) and King George III believed the colonists should pay the debt since it was their war. Britain now owned much more land and as an effort to rebuild the economy, the British government saw taxing the American colonies as a way to help pay their war debts.

The colonists believed in their motto "no taxation without representation," which meant they shouldn't be taxed by Britain when they had no representation in the British government. The colonists worried they would eventually lose their freedom.
