Throughout his life, Qin Shi continuously searched for immortality and wanted to keep the power he had in this world. Because he had many enemies, he also wanted to ensure his body and his treasures were safe once he passed away and was buried. As away of protecting himself in the afterlife, the emperor decided to build an entire army to guard his tomb. He called on thousands of craftsmen from all over China to help build the statues. Construction of the tomb began when the future emperor took power at the age of 13. Qin Shi is known for building the largest single tomb in the history of the world. In earlier dynasties, the afterlife was only viewed to be for royalty. There was not an afterlife for commoners. This changed over time as religions and cultures spread across China.
