Ancient China was one of the longest civilizations to exist in Asia, dating back thousands of years. There were 13 dynasties in ancient China beginning with the _____ and ending with the Qing. Ancient China had over _____ emperors. When an emperor died, the power was usually passed down to the oldest son. Natural barriers including the Himalayan Mountains, the _____ Desert, the Tibetan Plateau, the Yellow Sea, and the Chinese Sea protected ancient China from invasions. During the Ming and Qing dynasties of ancient China, the emperors lived in a palace known as the Forbidden City or “Zijn Cheng” in Chinese. It was called that because it was forbidden for _____ people to enter and was only for the _____, his family, and other high-ranking officials.

6 PASSAGES

Students will read 6 short passages about the topic, then answer questions.

The Forbidden Palace has a gate at each of the four corners. It can be broken down into two sections, the southern Outer Court, and the northern Inner Court. The Wu Men Gate, also known as the Meridian Gate, is the southern entrance into the palace. It leads to a courtyard where another gate leads to the Outer Court. The Outer Court has three buildings called the Hall of Preserving Harmony, the Hall of Central Harmony, and the Hall of Supreme Harmony. In this court, ceremonies and official business would take place. Another gate leads to the Inner Court which was the living space of the emperor and his family. Along with the buildings, many gardens can also be found within the palace. Legend says the palace was intended to have 9,999½ rooms. The half room was omitted on purpose in an effort to not upset their god of Heaven.
