George Washington had good leadership skills but the men in his army were farmers who did not know how to fight. His army did not have enough supplies. George lost a lot of battles.

George Washington was chosen as a person to help the colonists fight laws. A few years later, Britain started taxing the colonists in America. To tax means to collect money from. The American colonists were not happy.

Washington believed a way to show the King of Britain that they were not happy with the taxes was to stop using British goods.

The disagreements between Great Britain and American colonists went on for a long time. The disagreements led to the battles of Lexington and Concord in 1775.

Two months later, Washington was chosen to be the leader of the military during the Revolutionary War.
